

Delayed Gratification

Launched in January 2011, Delayed Gratification is the world's first Slow News magazine. It champions perspective, hindsight and context.

Always proud to be 'Last to Breaking News', Delayed Gratification returns to stories after the dust has settled to give the final word on the events that really mattered.

It's a beautiful quarterly publication filled with insightful long-form journalism, stories the mainstream media missed and eye-catching infographics.

Reviews

- "A leisurely (and contrary) look backwards over the previous three months" The Guardian
- "A counterpoint to the speedy news feeds we've grown accustomed to" Creative Review
- "A slower, more reflective type of journalism" The Economist
- "Perhaps we could all get used to this Delayed idea..." The Today Programme

Inside issue 62

Issue #62 looks back at January to March 2026, when Venezuela's president was captured, a former prince was arrested, and war broke out in the Persian Gulf

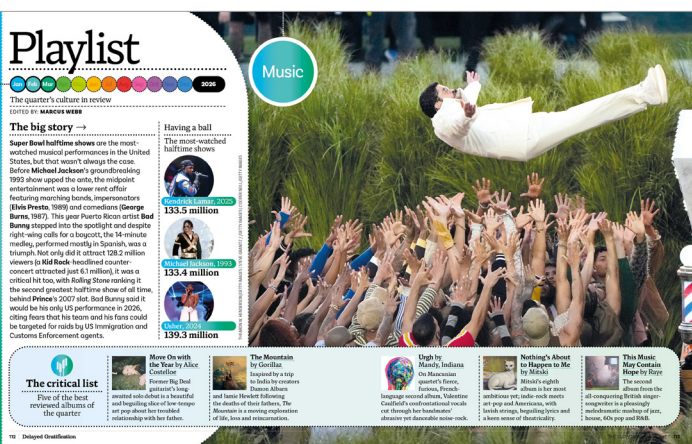

Highlights include:

- After Maduro: The surprisingly popular kidnapping of a Venezuelan president
- The 40-day war: The conflict in Iran explained through infographics
- Think it's all over? How Senegal won - and then lost - the Africa Cup of Nations
